#1

This is a large building on Mill Plain.

It houses yesterday, today and tomorrow.
But you cannot buy anything there.
They only allow you to borrow.

Building opened in 1963 though it took 4 elections to pass the $60,000 bond to do so.

The lookout cupola is so high.
It makes the river seem close by.
It graces a house on Officers' Row.
It's just a general old house, you know.

1886 Queen Anne's house, named for officer who lived there in 1936-38.

Is this a door used by spirits?
And is this just a ghostly stairway?
The building's somewhere in the Barracks
And overlooks the freeway.

Building was built in 1903-04 of brick, with a stone foundation and slate roof.

I am just a strange old airvent,
Perched high atop a roof.
And though I look uncommon.
I'm really just aloof.

This building is also in the Barracks.
It's all about weaponry and artillery.
It was built in 1904 and is on Hathaway.

My shape is tall and rounded
I was built in 1993.
The architect may have designed on a 'curve'
But I'm at the fore front of Business Technology.

I am so 'common'ly noticed.
Look up – I'm really quite high.
I may resemble a fountain pen – I'm not
So say the Alumni of 2004 and 5.

Name or Location:

Mother Joseph designed all this.
She wanted a school so badly.
Can you find these items perhaps
On the grounds of the Academy?

#6A

I was built of brick in '73;
My cross is visible through the trees.
I have a voice so deep and pretty.
If you can't find me, more's the pity.

Old and weathered wooden doors
Behind them so many chores were hiding.
They may have opened to a bakery
Or even the school laundry.

Behind the greenery is a door.
No one uses it anymore.
Did the students use it to go and come?
Or was it only used by nuns?

Do I make you dizzy-
As you gaze at my façade?
Day Hilborn designed me
And I gained him high regard.

This was Hilborn's most important work of the 1960s and
It gained him the title Member Emeritus of the American Institute of Architecture. It's located on Broadway.

In 1928, this pioneer mother came to Vancouver.
Her journey had not been a lark.
So Mr. and Mrs. Crawford
Had her settled in the park.

The sculpture was designed by Avarð Fairbanks. It is dedicated to all the pioneer mothers.

If you cannot see me-surely you can hear me.
I chime at regular hours,
I love overlooking the park
Nestled here in the flowers.

This structure was donated by George Probstel, founder of Burgerville. It was dedicated in April 2000.

There is no landing;
There are no stairs.
Where would you go?
Why is this door there?

Rumor has it that a resident made a window into a
Door so he could enjoy a cigar without his wife knowing.
Pity his neighbors on West 11th Street.

Bright red doors all in a row;
Are they open or restraining?
Just step inside them for a show
You may find it entertaining.

Here is the second clue in case the doors just won't do.

This building was built on Main Street in 1936. It was Day Hilborn's masterpiece of the 30s.

This was originally an animal house
When built in 1911 on Main.
The door surely had a function then
Or else someone would complain.

This is the only building of that era left standing that was built for a fraternal organization. It was sold in the 1970s and changes may explain
the door with no stairway.
